Originally built in as a 4 bedroom house in 1938 and substantial extended in the 1980s, the property is currently arranged with 3 large first floor bedrooms, but the original layout could easily be reinstated. Belmont also offers great potential for extension, subject to planning consent, including the conversion of the large integral garage/workshop.

Traditionally built, the property has facing brick elevations with an attractive porch and bay windows, under a concrete tiled roof with 2 tall brick chimneys.

An enclosed entrance porch with a hardwood front door leads to an L-shaped entrance hall with understairs storage space, cloakroom, and door to a utility room.

A pair of glazed double casement doors leads through to the triple aspect sitting room featuring a superb, granite fireplace (with ornate timber surround, mantel, and raised marble hearth), attractive bay window, and sliding patio doors lead out to the garden and terrace.
